

Bird Report, 2011-2015: Part 1, Non-passerines

GRAHAM CARPENTER AND PHILIPPA HORTON

INTRODUCTION

This report lists South Australian bird records of particular interest for the years 2011-2015. Unlike other Bird Reports published in recent years, it includes a greater range of species, largely because the status, distribution and abundance of even our most common species are often surprisingly poorly known, or are changing. Our knowledge of breeding distributions of most species is even poorer. The 5-year report also allows for comparisons between years.

The Report gives priority to regions of SA which are least known to provide a better understanding of bird distribution and status throughout the State, and also to reports of species from regions where they are listed as rare or unrecorded (based on the Birds SA Field list of the birds of South Australia, 5th ed. Blaylock et al. 2017). Also included are breeding records, reports outside the 'normal' season for seasonal visitors, unusually high numbers and records at the limits of a species' range.

The Report is based on records received direct from Birds SA members and in the bird record books circulated at monthly meetings, with additional records from the South Australian Museum database. There is also an increasing use of national birding websites to post rarities, lists for localities and trip reports, while Facebook sites such as 'South Aussie Birding' provide a local forum for posting photos and discussion. These sites have been scanned for additional records. Some reports have also been sourced from the Adelaide Ornithologists' Club newsletter, Bird Talk.

Because of the huge volume of records, particularly on internet sites, it is possible that we have overlooked some significant observations. We therefore hope that observers will continue to submit their records to Bird SA, particularly reports from areas that extend the range of species, both within known distributions and into regions where they are not currently listed. Many such records are listed in this Report. The Birds SA Rarities Committee (SARC) also encourages the submission of detailed reports of particular species that are rarely seen in SA.

Reports of some rare species (e.g. Orange-bellied Parrot) have not been listed due to security issues. We have also excluded some records because it was felt there was insufficient supporting information. Vetting records is difficult and we feel the onus is on the observer to provide adequate information to support their observation, particularly for species that are rarely recorded or are well outside of their normal distribution. This can be in the form of field notes submitted with the record or, particularly with recent advances in digital photography, a supporting photograph.

Although national on-line data collection sites provide a convenient platform for recording large volumes of bird data, the lack of adequate vetting often significantly limits their value. This has been highlighted during compilation of accurate species maps for South Australian species recently posted on the Birds SA website.

Non-Passerines

Part 1 of the Bird Report deals with records of non-passerine species. Part 2 (passerines) will be published in the next issue of the South Australian Ornithologist.

Highlights during the 5-year period were new State records of Amsterdam Albatross, Great Shearwater, Beach Stone-curlew, Semipalmated Plover and Grey-headed Lapwing, plus the first live reports of Grey Petrel and Little Shearwater. In addition, a probable Brown Booby was reported off southern YP. An unprecedented 'invasion' of Brown Quail (and Buff-banded Rail) occurred in spring 2011 (following a smaller irruption in spring 2001). Also encouraging is the increased breeding of Square-tailed Kites in the MLR.

Significant publications during the Report period were Peter Gower's (2012) Fleurieu Birds and Chris Baxter's (2015) Birds of Kangaroo Island. Reid (2017) reported on the birds seen in 2015-16 during a survey of the Diamantina River and associated channel country in the far NE. Dolman and Joseph (2015) high-lighted the importance of South Australia in the evolution of Australian birds based on genetic evidence.

Regular pelagic trips continued to provide much important information on the status of seabirds off the South Australian coast. Many beach-washed seabirds have been recovered and donated to the SA Museum, and now form a valuable part of the specimen collection.

The further development of storm-water fed wetlands within suburban areas (e.g. Laratinga Wetlands, Mount Barker) has been a feature in recent years. Also of merit was the re-instatement of water regulation to provide habitat for waterbirds at Tolderol Game Reserve (MM) in late 2014. These advances have in part been offset by the decline in waterbirds using the St Kilda Salfields since salt production ceased in 2013 (e.g. Rogers and Cox 2018).

Weather

Weather in SA became progressively drier over the five-year period. 2011 was similar to 2010 with very wet conditions in the north, especially due to the remnants of cyclone Yasi in February 2011. This led to resumed operation of the ferry at the Cooper Crossing on the Birdsville Track for the second year running and the flooding of Kati Thanda - Lake Eyre. Three years of average rainfall in northern districts followed from 2012 to 2014, but with below average rainfall in the agricultural districts. 2015 began with local heavy rains in the NE, but again rainfall was below average in the south.

As in the last Bird Report in 2010 (Rogers 2012), these conditions were behind continuing reports of large numbers of waterbirds in the NE, breeding of Banded Stilts at Lake Torrens (Pedler et al. 2016) and invasions of Brown Quail, Buff-banded Rail and Flock Bronzewings in more southerly regions, although numbers of spring migrants such as cuckoos, Cockatiels and Budgerigars remained low.

Interpretation

Nomenclature, list order and regions follow the Birds SA Field list of the birds of South Australia (Blaylock et al. 2017).

An asterisk denotes introduced species. Abbreviations used are: AOC = Adelaide Ornithologists' Club; CP = Conservation Park; GR = Game Reserve; NP = National Park; RP = Recreation Park; NPWS = National Parks & Wildlife Service; WH = waterhole; HS = homestead; OS = pastoral outstation; RH = roadhouse; Stn = pastoral station; RS = railway station; SW = sewage works; ad = adult; imm = immature; juv = juvenile; over = flying overhead; hd = heard; pr = pair.

*Common Ostrich, Struthio camelus

A small population in the south-east of NW survives from farming in the early 1900s (see Parker et al. 1979). Recent reports from other regions are of released birds following the collapse of a short-lived meat industry in the 1990s.
